TV Probes TMI's Rescue & Retrieval Work

What Did They Discover?

Tune in October 13th to the BIO Channel for the 2-part episode "Journey of the Lost" on The unexplained.

Filming "Journey of the Lost" A Participant's Story

"Thirteen, strangers from the United States and India arrive at The Monroe Institute (TMI) in Faber, Virginia on a beautiful clear March day. We come to TMI to participate in the filming of our experience as we attend the Lifeline program."

From "The Monroe Institute's Lifeline on 'The unexplained' in October" By Patricia Gore

...The Lifeline Program emphasis is primarily one of service. To provide assistance to both those here in the physical and also to those in non-physical matter reality...For the souls who have made their transition from physical matter reality but may need assistance in reaching the area in which they can connect with their loved ones and guides.

Robert Monroe describes, in his book Ultimate Journey, that sometimes individuals become "stuck" for a variety of reasons and need assistance reaching the Park, Reception Center or Way Station....Today some people may call this process "ghost-busting," others who have experienced TMI's approach may see it more as conducting a rescue-retrieval mission.

Pat Gore

We all had agreed previously to have this intensely personal experience filmed and shared on national television....Two facilitators join us, along with a crew of camera operators, producers and sound men...

The Ancient Service of Psychopomp

Gems from TMI's Archives

TMI's archives are full of treasures, some tucked away and invisible to the casual eye. In this video clip, Institute residential trainer Kevin Turner describes the activity Bob Monroe termed "rescue-retrieval work," also called soul retrieval or psychopomp -- the purpose of the Lifeline program.

Rescue and retrieval work is in service to those here in physical matter reality and to those "There" who have made their transitions from the physical and who may benefit from assistance. In preparation for this service, participants typically release layers of limiting beliefs and resultant fears.

Lifeliners Under a Lens

What was it like to be filmed doing the intimate work of communicating with the dead across dimensions?

Lifeline is perhaps the most satisfying, amazing and humbling. The hairs on the back of my neck stand up as I recall the experience!

-B. Kallsen

Lifeline group during The unexplained filming

It was an extraordinary and enlightening experience for me. Since returning from TMI I have made some major life changes.

- P. Hendrick

My perception of the natural world was altered in a way that is not easy to explain...one participant commented that she perceived a much brighter aura around me.

- J. Fisher

The energy and chemistry among diverse total strangers...I was honored to have been a small part of the experience and will always remember it.

- G. Atkins

When I found out the Lifeline program would be filmed, my first reaction was to avoid it. I didn't want to be filmed. The filming ended up being easier than anticipated. With an already great group of participants and trainers, the film crew added even more and became a presence integral to the energy of the group. The Lifeline program was sometimes touching, sometimes surprising and always interesting, glad that I decided to be part of it.

- N. Sudman

It's not always easy to share what we experience. Knowing there are people out there who might be afraid to come forward is why I think we all participated. We wanted to say "You are not alone, there is more going on than you might be led to believe, and you, too, have the ability to experience that for yourself." Don't just take our words for it.

- M. Betts

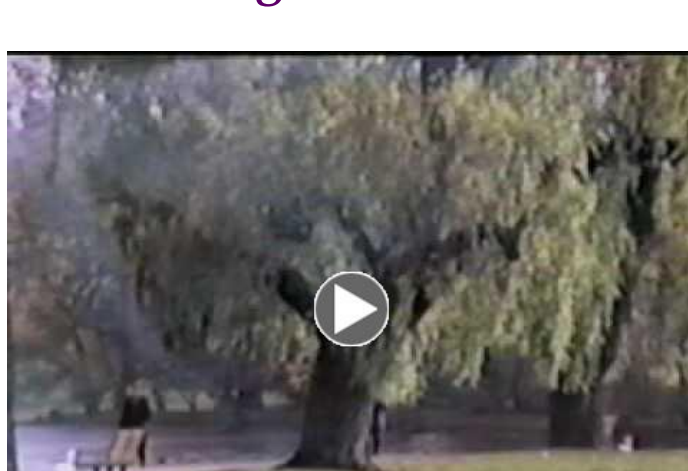

The unexplained film crew

It was a little odd at first, seeing the crew and cameras hovering around everywhere, but very quickly they felt like part of the family and added to the energy and the experience. I was very humbled and pleased and often moved to tears of gratitude during the meditations and exercises. I am incredibly grateful for having been a part of this amazing Lifeline program and once again having the chance to share in the love and energy of the the Monroe Institute

Visiting the Afterlife

According to Bob Monroe

Visiting the Afterlife

Bob speaks of "the Park" or way station at the level of Focus 27 where the newly deceased may rest and recuperate while considering the most appropriate next step in their journey.

Primary emphasis is service to those here in physical matter reality and those There who have made the transitions from the physical and who may benefit from assistance.

Many participants realize that at the same time they are also retrieving lost parts or fragments of themselves.

Investigate facets of their own current beliefs and structures for operating within the world.

It is anticipated that there may be a year wait on this program, after the upcoming debut.
